

Rep. Paul Gosar shared a link.

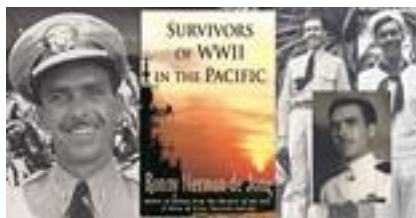

10 hours ago

Today marks the 73rd anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, and while many stories have been told about that “date which will live in infamy”... it is important to never forget the heroic acts of our men and women who sacrificed so much to defend this nation. One of those heroes resides in Prescott, Arizona and vividly remembers his account of that December morning in 1941.

Edward Sowman was a U.S. Navy Radioman 2nd class who served on the heavy cruiser USS New Orleans, docked in Pearl Harbor. He remembers Japanese fighter planes flying so close to his ship that he could clearly see their faces. Ed lost many friends that day and he still carries the scars of Pearl Harbor with him always. Click on the picture below to hear from Ed himself about surviving that somber day. He was featured this past August on Morning Scramble with AZTV.com's Sandy Moss.

To read more about Ed Sowman's story, you should check out Ronny Herman de Jong's book titled Survivors of World War II. The author, a survivor herself of a Japanese prison camp, gathered and edited all of these stories so that they will never be forgotten.

Show your appreciation for Ed and all of the men and women who served at Pearl Harbor by LIKING and SHARING this post.

Pearl Harbor Survivor Edward Sowman on Morning Scramble

Pearl Harbor Survivor Edward Sowman discusses his memories of the December 7th attack 73 years ago - Hosted by Sandy Moss on Morning Scramble